Introduction

This guidance is for everyone who works with Children and Young people and their families in Bristol. It is about the way we can all work together, share information, and put the child and their family at the centre, providing effective support to help them solve problems and find solutions at an early stage to prevent problems from escalating. There may be times when the needs of the family are such that intensive or specialist statutory intervention is required and this document provides a framework for supporting professionals to determine this.

All Children and Young People will receive Universal Services, such as maternity services at birth, health visiting, school nursing, access to children's centres, schooling and youth services. Universal services seek, together with parents and families, to meet all the needs of children so that they are happy, healthy and able to learn and develop securely.

However, some children and families will need extra or multi-agency coordinated help to be healthy, safe and to achieve their potential. In Bristol, we want to offer help and support to these children and families at an early point and in a voluntary way, whenever problems develop. We seek to offer support early to help families solve problems, or to reduce the impact of problems that have already emerged. The early help network around the child will work together with families to meet the need, support the family in resolving the problem and prevent it becoming entrenched.

In this guidance we have identified four levels of need: Universal, Additional, Intensive and Specialist. Services for children with Additional and Intensive needs are sometimes known as targeted services, and a co-ordinated multi-disciplinary approach is usually best, involving an Early Help Plan and a Lead Practitioner to work closely with the child and family to ensure they receive all the support they require. Early help assessment and planning will be led by a lead practitioner in the setting that knows the child and family best (eg. children's centre, health visiting team, school) at "Additional" level, or by practitioners within the local authority Family Help service or an identified specialist agency at "Intensive" level.

Specialist services are where the needs of the child are so great, that statutory and/or specialist intervention is required to keep them safe or to ensure their continued development. Examples of specialist services include Safeguarding Social Work units, Disabled Children's Specialist Service or the Youth Justice Service (YJS).

In Bristol we believe that working together effectively to provide flexible and responsive support at the earliest possible time and at the lowest appropriate level of intervention is key to supporting Children, Young People and their Families to achieve their potential and to prevent reliance on reactive specialist services.

Our Vision

We want the best for Bristol's children, they are at the heart of everything we do.

- For our children and young people to have the best possible start in life, gaining the support and skills they need to prosper in adulthood
- For our children and young people to be welcomed into a city with a culture of nurture and care, with opportunities to grow with support from their community
- For our children and young people to have their needs recognised at the earliest point in a system that collaborates to help them to thrive
- For our children and young people to have a home which sustains, nourishes and protects them in safe and healthy families
- For our children and young people to have a confident sense of self and identity in a cohesive and diverse city
- For our children and young people to access education that is inclusive and values diversity, where they learn from each other and benefit from an understanding of their different experiences
- For our children and young people to own the whole city and experience and benefit from all that Bristol offers.

Bristol's Belonging Strategy for Children and Young People (2021–2024) embeds our vision within a whole city commitment to reduce inequality and build inclusion, creating a city where children and their families can thrive. Our focus on belonging is underpinned by recognition that positive relationships are crucial to ensuring that every child, young person and parent feels themselves to be an integral, valued and visible part of the city.

The Belonging Strategy supports our city-wide commitment to implement a system-wide trauma informed approach to our work with children and their families, rooted in relationships between staff and service users and within and between organisations. Further details of this approach can be found within the Trauma Informed System Knowledge and Skills Framework Trauma-Informed System (bristolsafeguarding.org).

Our Principles

We will enact our vision guided by the following principles and approaches:

1 Child Focused Practice

The child is at the centre of all we do.

In all our work, we will listen carefully to the child's voice, and focus on their experiences and the impact that these experiences have on their life. The Signs of Safety model should be used by all professionals to gain children's voices and to place this at the centre of our work. "How will these actions improve outcomes for the child" will be our central guiding question. The safety and wellbeing of the child or young person is paramount and will be kept at the centre of all our work.

2 Participation of parents and carers

We will enable parent and carer involvement in discussions and decision making which impacts on them and their children and recognise them as the experts within their family. Participation of parents and carers ensures that they can contribute to assessments and plans about them and their families and can identify and build on strengths and skills to make lasting changes. Parents have the primary responsibility to meet the needs of their children. We recognise how challenging parenting can be and asking for help will be seen as a sign of strength.

3 Think Family

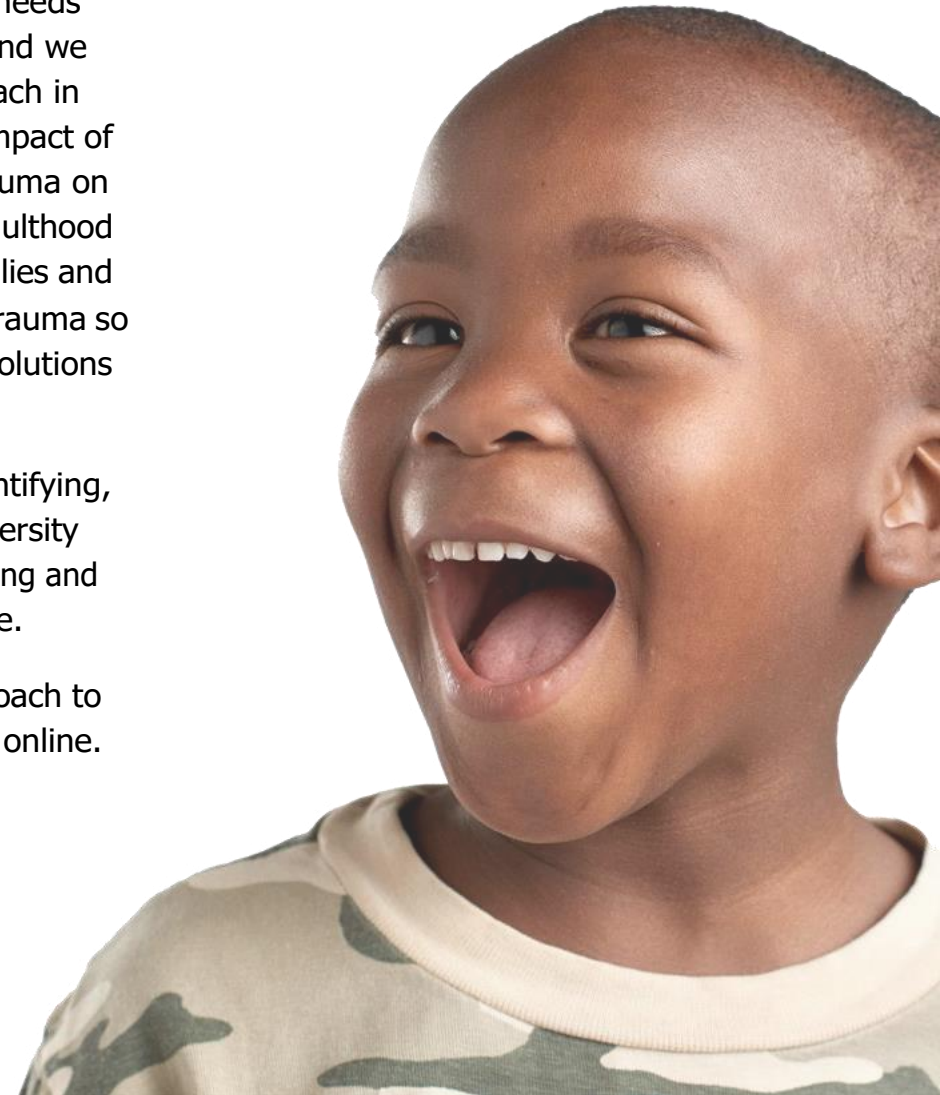

Our approach must recognise and respond to the needs of significant family members without losing sight of the children. We will support families by building on their strengths, as well as identifying and openly working with difficulties. Supporting parents and carers with their own support needs will improve outcomes for children but must be done in the context of tackling the root causes of concerns and promoting lasting change. Early help should be offered to support parents and carers to build on the strengths and sources of support within their own family networks.

4 Trauma Informed Practice

Our approach must recognise the needs of all family members holistically and we will take a trauma informed approach in our practice. We understand the impact of adversity, trauma and complex trauma on children's development and into adulthood and will share knowledge with families and communities about adversity and trauma so that they are enabled to develop solutions that work for them.

Our interventions will focus on identifying, recognising and responding to adversity (current or past), supporting parenting and building relationships and resilience.

To read more about the local approach to trauma informed practice in Bristol online.

5 Signs of Safety – Strengths based approach

Using 'Signs of Safety', interventions with Children, Young People and their families will be strengths-based and safety-organised, placing the child's voice at the centre of our work. The Signs of Safety Framework asks practitioners to think about any complicating factors that may make it harder for a parent to meet their child's needs, and to consider what is getting in the way of achieving safety and wellbeing for the child or young person.

The Signs of Safety provides four simple questions to ask when thinking about and working with a child, young person and family:

- 1. What are we worried about?
(Past harm, future danger, and complicating factors)
- 2. What's working well?
(Existing strengths and safety)
- 3. What needs to happen?
(Future safety)
- 4. How worried are we on a scale of 0 to 10? (Judgement)

6 Systemic Practice

Our systemic practice approach offers a theory of change that enables practitioners to engage with the complexity and challenges faced by many vulnerable families. This approach places children and families firmly at the centre of our involvement and encourages practitioners to avoid looking at presenting issues in isolation but to consider individuals as part of the wider system / context in which they exist.

Systemic practice encourages all practitioners to reflect on the role that they play in facilitating change within families and is supported by relationship-based practice; spending time getting to know and understand the families we work with in order to create the conditions to facilitate change.

Our Model for Meeting Children and Families' Needs

Our Bristol model relies on practitioners and other professionals investing in trusting and open relationships with children and families to support them to address their needs at the lowest possible level. We will always look to meet the child, young person or family's needs at the earliest possible point and agree to actively work with children and families to prevent their needs escalating to a higher level.

We will only request services at a higher level after we have done everything possible to meet needs at the current level and have assessed the needs are such that a higher level of service is required.

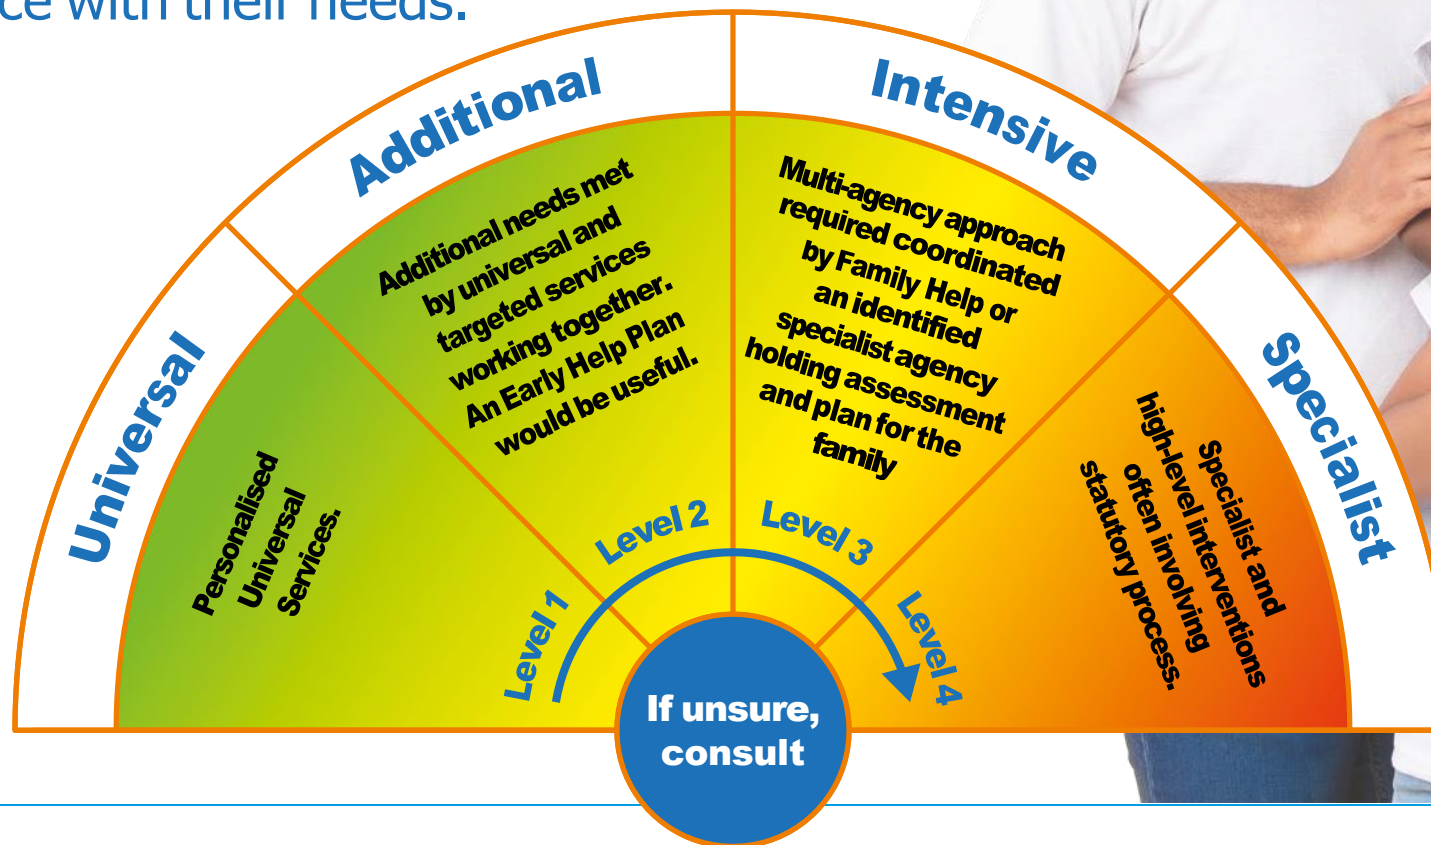

The Levels of Need tables and the Bristol Continuum of Need (Windscreen) set out below together illustrate the support that a child and family can expect to receive at varying levels of need. However, we recognise that each child and family member is an individual, and each family is unique in its make-up, so reaching decisions about levels of needs and the best intervention requires discussion, collaboration between the services who best know the child, reflection and professional judgement.

Engagement with families is paramount to the success of any support or intervention provided. It is vital that all professionals can confidently and clearly describe the Bristol System to children and families so that they have clear expectations and understanding of the actions being taken and the response that will be offered.

Continuum of Need

All partners working with children, young people and their families will offer support as soon as we are aware of any additional needs. We will always seek to work together to provide support to children, young people and their families at the lowest level possible in accordance with their needs.

Level of Need Table

Access to services in Level 2 – Additional

Earlier, solution focused interventions are likely to prevent problems from escalating. An honest and open conversation between the family and practitioners to share concerns should be the starting point. By undertaking a strengths-based approach and working in collaboration with the child or young person, their family and other practitioners working with the family, coordinating professionals can ensure that any agreed actions reflect the family's priorities and focus on preventing problems before they occur.

Community Based Services

Services at Level 2 will be accessed via single agency referrals to community-based services. Parents should always agree to any referral and to sharing information with anyone. Consent from Young People over 13 should be gained where they are able to make a decision to give their agreement. However, lack of consent from the young person should not prove a barrier to providing services to the consenting parents and wider family.

Additional advice can be sought from the area Family Help teams or FLORA team (for disabled children) when involved professionals are unsure as to what service will meet an identified need. The contact details for these teams are available within the appendices pages.

Professionals should sign up to area-based bulletins from the Family Help teams which detail support available to families in the community.

A First Response referral is not the correct pathway for Level 2 need. When First Assessment Service receive information about children that indicates a Level 2 Additional need for the Child or Young Person and their Family, details of this need may be shared with key agencies around the child (in accordance with legal principles of information sharing) in order that Additional Support can be offered at an early intervention level.

Team Around the Family and Early Help plans

Where there is more than one service working alongside a child and family, it is helpful for the family and involved practitioners/services to hold a Team Around the Family meeting, to share information and to agree and co-ordinate an Early Help Plan. This meeting should be organised by a lead professional who holds the closest relationship to the family and must involve the family and other professionals in a setting in which the family is comfortable and able to fully participate.

An Early Help Plan is a tool to use with the family to discuss and record the strengths, needs and goals that they identify, leading to a plan as to how professionals and the family's network can support them to achieve the identified goals.

An Early Help Plan does not need to follow a specific format but should be clear about strengths, needs and goals, what the next steps are and who is responsible for actions. A completed Early Help Plan remains the responsibility of the supporting services to retain, in accordance with their own record keeping procedures. A copy of the Early Help Plan should always go to the family members involved, including children and young people directly (in accordance with their age and understanding).

Access to Services in Level 3 – Intensive

Prior to requesting services at Level 3 – Intensive, practitioners are expected to have worked together with the family to meet the Additional needs of the child and their family using resources such as an Early Help Plan and/or Team Around the Family (TAF) meetings.

Where practitioners identify that a child and their family would benefit from a more intensive multi-disciplinary response than they can provide; they should discuss this with the family (within a TAF meeting where possible) and complete a referral into the First Response Assessment Service, requesting a Family Help (early help) response. (Make a referral). A copy of the Level 2 Early Help Plan can be attached to the First Response Webform.

Family Help, or an identified specialist agency, can provide support for children and families who have multiple complex needs requiring intensive and co-ordinated support. Referrals at level 3 must be made with the full knowledge of the family and their views and consent taken into full consideration when deciding whether to progress a referral. In situations where consent cannot be secured but concerns for the child's welfare are such that a referral is progressed against the family's wishes, referring professionals should clearly document the family views on support and the issues raised, and the professional rationale for the action taken. Agencies receiving level 3 referrals can provide assertive outreach to try to secure the engagement of the family. However, ultimately families must work with these services on a voluntary basis and commit to finding solutions collaboratively as a family, with professional support. Evidence should be provided that these needs have been identified and support at level 1 and 2 has already been provided with sustained efforts to secure the family's engagement in a plan of support. When requesting support at level 3 it is important to share how the family has been supported up until now; what has worked, what worked less well and what support is needed now.

The Early Help Pod within First Assessment Service will triage the request and either provide advice and guidance to practitioners about continuing a Team around Family approach at Additional level 2, or will progress a referral into the Area Family Help teams or an identified specialist agency. Referring professionals will receive a response to their request within five working days.

Family Help teams are made up of a range of professionals with different backgrounds, expertise and qualifications. When working with a family the identified lead practitioner will help them find solutions to their needs. Needs and goals will be identified through use of a Single Assessment undertaken with the family, resulting in a Family Action Plan. Professionals working across levels 1 and 2 will be asked to work alongside the Family Help team or identified specialist agency and contribute support to this plan.

Arrangements are in place between Children's Social Care (including the Disabled Children's Specialist Service) and Family Help teams via weekly Locality Meetings to facilitate a consistent "step-in" of safeguarding support for families working with Level 3 services with emerging safeguarding needs. This forum also facilitates a consistent "step-down" of support once high-level specialist / statutory needs have been met.

Should any professional become aware of significant harm occurring during a Level 3 period of intervention, the Family Help team should be notified immediately so that an area based social care response can be arranged.

Access to Services in Level 4 – Specialist Services

When the needs of children and their families escalate beyond Level 3, or where there has been insufficient change with support given at Level 3, Children's Social Care will seek to work with families on a voluntary basis with agreement/ consent, often in partnership with other professionals, to improve the welfare of children and to prevent problems escalating to a point that statutory child protection intervention is needed.

Where there is concern for the welfare of a child and a practitioner is unsure on the most appropriate service pathway to take, they must consult with their own manager/ safeguarding lead. Family history, consent / willingness to work with services at level 3, strengths and safety within the family network, and the level of risk and need will be relevant considerations as to what level of support to request. Safeguarding leads can access non-urgent advice from a qualified social worker within their area Family Help team when additional consultation is needed.

Children's Social Care (CSC) has a responsibility to Children in Need under section 17 of the Children Act 1989. That is, children whose development would be impaired if services are not provided. This includes children who have a permanent and substantial disability, which limits their ability to carry out the daily tasks of living. Children's Social Care engagement with Children In Need (CIN) is on a consensual basis. Parents, or young people who are aged over 13 and competent to make a decision, can refuse some or all such offers of assistance.

For Children in Need, a request to Children's Social Care is appropriate when more substantial interventions are needed than can be provided at Level 3; such as where a child's development is being significantly impaired because of the impact of complex parental mental ill health, learning disability or substance misuse, or very challenging behaviour in the home. A Social Care request is also appropriate where parents need practical support and short break services because of a disabled child's complex care needs, or where there are worries about the impact of the child's disability on the family which may be better understood through a social work assessment to identify and plan for the Child, Young Person and Family support needs. Some situations requiring Child in Need support will arise in an acute situation. However, for many Children in Need requiring a social care response, support will have been offered through levels 2–3 prior to a social care intervention.

Consent should be sought from the family prior to making a Child in Need referral. However, lack of consent should not be seen as an absolute barrier to referral if the professional's judgement is that failure to refer could lead to future harm, escalation of need or risk to the child.

The second area of Children's Social Care responsibility is Child Protection; Children's Social Care must make enquiries under section 47 of the Children Act 1989, where there is cause to believe that a child is suffering or is likely to suffer significant harm. The Children Act 1989 introduced the concept of significant harm as the threshold that justifies compulsory intervention in family life in the best interests of children. Professionals in all agencies have a responsibility to submit a First Response Referral to Children's Social Care when it is believed or suspected that the child is suffering or is likely to suffer significant harm.

There are no absolute criteria on which to rely upon when judging what constitutes significant harm. Consideration of the severity of ill-treatment may include the degree and the extent of physical harm, the duration and frequency of abuse and neglect, and the severity of the emotional and physical impact on the child. It is important to consider age and context – babies and young children are particularly vulnerable – and parental factors such as history of significant domestic abuse, substance misuse or mental ill-health.

Significant harm could occur where there is a single event, such as a violent assault or sexual abuse, or where a child tells us about longer term physically, emotionally or sexually abusive behaviour towards them. More often, significant harm is identified when there have been a number of events which have cumulatively compromised the child's physical and psychological wellbeing; for example, a child whose health and development is severely impaired through neglect.

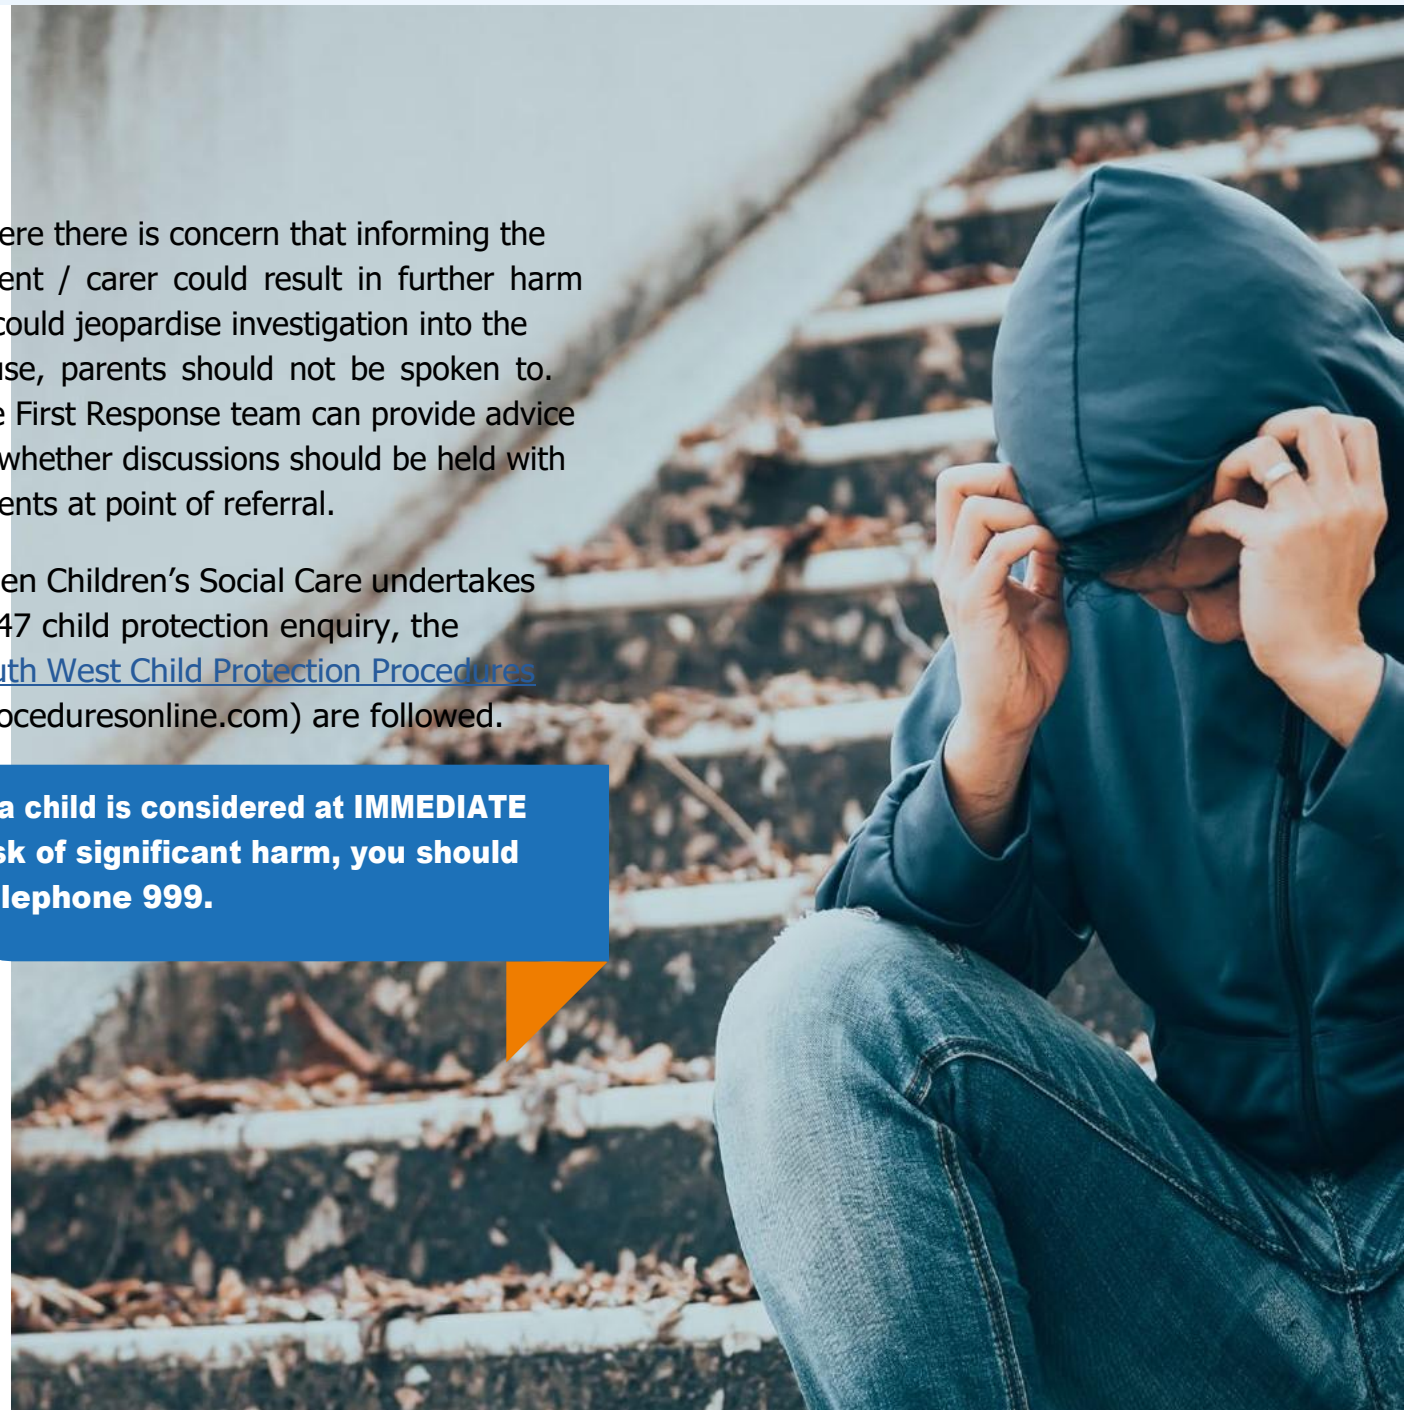

Consent is not required for child protection referrals, and consideration of whether to discuss referrals with parents / carers must be made with the child's immediate and longer-term welfare as the central concern. In most circumstances, significant harm referrals relating to an escalation of concern over time will be appropriate to discuss with the parent / carer. Services are likely to have had prior involvement in relation to these concerns and parents will know what professionals are worried about.

In situations of children newly telling us of ongoing or acute abuse circumstances, professionals must consider whether speaking to the parents would place the child at risk of further harm or have the potential to jeopardise a police or social care investigation, for example through parents removing the child from school or undue influence to change or withdraw the allegation.

Where there is concern that informing the parent / carer could result in further harm or could jeopardise investigation into the abuse, parents should not be spoken to. The First Response team can provide advice on whether discussions should be held with parents at point of referral.

When Children's Social Care undertakes a s47 child protection enquiry, the South West Child Protection Procedures (proceduresonline.com) are followed.

If a child is considered at IMMEDIATE risk of significant harm, you should telephone 999.

First Response referral process

First Response (within the First Assessment Service) is the front door to Children's Services at level 3 (Intensive) and level 4 (Specialist Services) in Bristol. All referrals requesting these services should go through First Response.

You should make a referral

- to the police on 999 if you are currently witnessing a child being harmed or in a situation of immediate risk
- to First Response straight away on 0117 903 6444 if your concern relates to a disclosure of abuse requiring a same day response. Only professional referrals of exceptional urgency will be accepted by phone.
- For all other requests you must use our webform. Make a referral \(bristol.gov.uk\)

Families and members of the public who are referring or self-referring should always be asked to call the First Response team on 0117 9036 444.

First Response receive a high volume of referrals, so it is essential that referrals are of good quality, are clear what service is being requested, and contain as much information as possible to help them build an accurate picture. It is important that the referrer includes their own contact details, the details of the child and their family, and how best to contact everyone involved as First Response may need to request further information as part of the triage process. Requests for support at level 3 should indicate how support has been offered to the family at level 2 to prevent the escalation in need. Additional supporting documents can be attached to the webform.

Those making a referral to First Response should consider and include:

- Whether there is an immediate risk of harm to the child requiring a same day safeguarding response.
- The views of the parents, carers and child on the referral / service you are requesting and whether they consent for the First Response team to seek and share information from other agencies.
- What you are worried about: Past, current and future harm
- The lived experience of the child and the impact of your worries on the child / children.
- The child's voice – what is the child telling you, both verbally and behaviourally, about their experiences.
- Strengths, networks and resources available to the family.

- What support you think would address the worries that you have, and what support has already been offered.
- The views of the parents, carers and young person: their wishes, feelings and preferences.

Referrals should always use non-jargonistic language and must be made with the knowledge of the family unless a safeguarding response is being requested. Referrals made to First Response with insufficient detail or without parental consent when it is required will be returned to the referring agency for further action and consideration. Returned referrals are not recorded on the local authority database and the identified worries must be held by the referring agency until a new referral is submitted in accordance with the advice from the First Response team.

Family Help support and Child in Need services require parental engagement, however, agencies should work collaboratively and proactively to make services accessible and address barriers to access. Information can be shared between professionals without consent at levels 3 and 4 where there is a clear public duty to do so, but parents should be engaged in this information sharing and their views and wishes taken into account before it is done. Where support is ultimately declined by the parent/carers, services cannot be provided unless concerns are significant and need to be managed as part of a child protection (level 4) process.

First Response manage new referrals and requests only. If a child is already working with a social worker or a Family Help worker, information should be shared directly with the lead professional.

All Requests for Help submitted for children/young people who are not currently open to either Family Help or Children's Social Care including the Disabled Children Service are triaged by the Early Help coordinators or the Social Work Deputy Team managers (in accordance with the service requested) on receipt. An initial risk related RAG rating will be applied – Safeguarding requests will be managed within 24 hours (urgent requests within 4 hours), requests requiring further enquiries (such as MASH activity) to establish the correct support pathway for a family but with no immediate safeguarding need will be managed within 72 hours, requests for Family Help support will be managed within 5 working days. These timescales ensure that decision making is responsive to risk, timely, proportionate and relevant to the needs of the child and their family.

Once a decision has been reached, the referrer will be advised of the outcome using the contact details provided. Where a “No Further Action” decision is made, or it is felt that support could be provided at Level 2, the outcome letter will advise of this and the identified lead agency will be expected to continue or commence provision of support for the family according to this advice. On some occasions, the team may notify key services around the child of Level 2 Additional needs identified by responsive services (ambulance, police, NHS 111, A+E) in order that early support can be offered. When services are agreed at Level 3 or Level 4, the referrer will be advised as to which area-based team or agency the referral has been sent to. Referrers must feedback the outcome of their referral to the family.

Whenever it is established that there is cause to believe that a child is suffering or is likely to suffer significant harm, a section 47 Child Protection enquiry is undertaken. This will involve social care liaison with police, health and other agencies and will include a strategy discussion. At this discussion, normally in the form of a virtual meeting, full information is shared, and agreement is made regarding immediate and longer-term next steps. An assessment of the child’s circumstances, including risks and needs is undertaken following the strategy meeting using a Child and Family Assessment.

The assessment may lead to a Child Protection Conference where a multi-agency decision will be made in relation to whether a Child Protection Plan is needed to support the family to achieve safety. The aim of statutory intervention is always to reach a point of safety where the level of support can ‘step down’ - children formerly supported under s.17 (CIN) or s.47 (Child Protection) may be supported using a Team Around the Family approach as the intervention ends. When required Court processes will be instigated to protect the child or young person.
